Greetings!

2013 was a vibrant year for us all thanks to the growing interest on Russia both at domestic and international level. In the center of the attention are topics such as president Putin’s return to office, Russian diplomacy that shined in resolving the Syria crisis, and the Sochi Winter Olympic Games soon to come. Recently, Russia has been spending a great deal of efforts in various means to expand its soft power. Nonetheless, such efforts are not without any criticism that they are not so effective. I speculate that maybe Russia is a case that shows the limit of the state-led policies of soft power expansion.

That is precisely why it is important for us to take time to look back in history, at the moments when the Russian merit received the most attention. Exploration into the period in which Russian arts and culture mesmerized intellectuals from all over the world and especially Russian Modernism that tried to interpret the modern era in a new way will give us leeway and opportunity to embark on an expedition into how we will see the 21st century.

In this regard the Institute for Russian, East European and Eurasian Studies at Seoul National University with the Slavic Research Center at Hokkaido University has prepared the 6th annual joint symposium on "Modern as the Past: Russian Modernism viewed from the 21st century". I hope that this event will be a meaningful gathering for us all to cultivate new way of understanding the Russian merit and today’s world. I look forward to a great sharing and meeting of the minds and thoughts.

Thank you.
